The University Limited Submissions Process at Carolina
ORD: Innovation In Research

WHAT ARE LIMITED SUBMISSIONS GRANTS AND AWARDS?

• Funding opportunities for which the University is allowed to submit a limited number of nominations or proposals.
• Many of these awards provide high visibility and prestige.
• Winning enhances the UNC faculty and the University.
• ORD manages the University-wide process for selection.

What Is the process at Carolina?

Announcements:
• Are sent to directors and chairs of relevant academic units, inviting nominations;
• Include submissions package requirements and internal deadlines.

Peer Review Committees:
• Meet to confer and select the University nominee from the group of confirmed candidates put forward for the award or grant;
• Composed only of faculty members who have expertise in the research being reviewed (faculty are identified by candidates under review);
• University nominees are chosen by the faculty committee;
• The ORD Director facilitates all reviews;
• Notification of internal review outcomes are communicated to Deans, Chairs, candidates, and central administrative officials.

ORD Support for University Nominees:
• Serves as a liaison between the University and the award-granting agency;
• Secures copies of previous successful applications;
• Helps obtain institutional endorsement, when appropriate;
• Provides nominees with review-committee feedback;
• Arranges for award-mentorship opportunities;
• Partners with development office where appropriate.

Contact Regina Bartolone (regina_bartolone@unc.edu, 919-962-7504) or visit our web site to explore this topic in detail.

http://research.unc.edu/offices/research-development/limited-submission-awards/index.htm